My goal would be to contribute ideas that improve opportunities for athletes while also supporting the clubs and coaches who develop them every day. If elected, I would be pleased to share my experience in athlete development, club management, and high-performance coaching with the Judo Ontario team. Natasha (Tash) Monkman is a proud third generation judoka. Her grandfather was Sensei Bill Gribben, who originally founded Kiichi-Sai Judo Club in Whitby, Ontario in 1966. Tash was practically raised on the tatami, starting judo at Kiichi-Sai at a very young age and competing in shiai by age 6. Tash regularly competed throughout the 1980s and 1990s, including representing Team Ontario at two Canadian Junior Nationals and also medalling at two back-to-back USJA tournaments. At 17 years old, Tash earned her Shodan in June 1998.

Tash attended Mount Allison University and then attended Osgoode Hall Law School, graduating in 2006 and being called to the Ontario Bar in 2007. Tash is a pensions, benefits and compensation lawyer with Hicks Morley Hamilton Stewart Storie LLP, Canada's largest management-side labour and employment law firm, where she is the chair of the firm's Pensions, Benefits and Compensation Practice Group. well as compensation matters.

After stepping away for the better part of two decades during which she established her legal practice and had two amazing children (Euan and Jenny), Tash returned to the tatami in 2024, shortly after enrolling her son at a local dojo in Whitby. Within weeks, Tash was back on the mats and soon began teaching, coaching and even training to compete again. Tash also became a member of the Judo Ontario Equity, Diversity and Inclusion committee in 2026.
